Bremen High School Senior Wins Art Competition

Bremen High School senior Demi Edwards' "Glamorous?" took first place Saturday during the Artistic Discovery 2011 awards ceremony, the Second Congressional District's annual high school art competition.

"Glamorous?" is a mixed media work that challenges smoking while paying tribute to starlets of the past. Demi won a trip to Washington, D.C. as part of her prize, and all three top finishers earned a free art class at South Suburban College, which hosted the art show.

The 2nd and 3rd Place winners were Lauren Boulden of Bremen High School and Monika Kasowska of Homewood-Flossmoor High School, respectively.

The judges also selected three Honorable Mention winners. They were Shawn Barbee of Thornton Township High School, Nasthalia Casimir of Homewood-Flossmoor High School, and Manju Connolly of Homewood-Flossmoor High School.

Every student artist received a certificate of participation.
